

about a two to three mile radius of the historic city center. They document the development of the city, its social patterns and economic success and the architectural tastes of its residents during a 110 year period. These resources are artifacts linking Tyler's history with the places where those events occurred and the places created by those events. They are worthy of study. The most significant are worthy of landmark designation, and most importantly, preservation, which is simply conservation and use.
